ŞARK-I KABUL-U LIBAS MAGAZASI

Kiş ve kurban bayramı münasebetiyle

Tiring Galata

Galata'da Tiring mağazası gayet şık ve son moda melbusat celeb etmiş olduğunu muhterem müşterilerine arz etmekte şerefiyab oluyor. İşbu melbusat Avrupa'nın en muteber fabrikalarının en son ipdaatından emin ve musikaf bir tarz intihab ile seçilip ayrılmıştır.

Mağazayı bir kere ziyaret ederek teşhir edilen emtia-i nefiseye bir defacık atf-ı nazar ve muayene edecek müsterin-i kiramın Tiring ticarethanesinde malların aynı zamanda hem cins hem zerafet ve hem de ehveniyet gibi üç hassa-i mühimmeyi cami olduğunu derhal takdir buyuracakları şüphesizdir.

GLOSSARY

- Alaca A narrow fabric weaved with red and blue marine threads. Also, a red fabric having yellow stripes
- Batiste A soft, somewhat sheer fabric in plain weave given a mercerized finish and used for infants' wear, dresses, blouses and lingerie.
- Bazin A fabric which was very like the diagonal serge.
- Bugran or triplure A lining which was used in the maintenance of the rigidity of the neck and front of the shirts. Its speciality was that its dressing was very strong.
- Cabot A twill material, very resistant and stronger than shirting. It originated from the United States.
- Calico A printed fabric of plain weave formerly much used for dresses. It was commonly found with dark ground and small white figures obtained by means of discharge printing.
- Chintz A drapery, slip cover and upholstery fabric, usually of plain weave and fine cotton yarns. It is generally printed with small bright floral patterns. Originated from India, the word chint means in Hindu language "colored or variegated". This fabric was brought to Europe in the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries by the Portuguese, the Dutch and the English where it flourished under the names pintado, chintz, calico, toile peinte, perse and indienne.

- Cloth A fabric manufactured of loosely spun and fuzzy carded woolen yarns. It frequently had a napped surface and consequently, a soft and fluffy texture.
- Cretonne A printed cotton fabric used for draperies, slip covers and upholstery. It is generally heavier and coarser than chintz and has a thick soft filling yarn.
- Crêpe A light-weight, plain weave fabric with a crinkled surface.
- Dokuma A sort of ticking (a heavy twill fabric). It was weaved by the cotton threads numbered between 21 and 24. It was mainly used for slip-covers, bed-ticking and cloths of home life.
- Dimicoton A sort of fustian, twill or diagonal. Its back is fluffy. In brief, it is a sort of flannelette, fluffy on one side and was used for the manufacture of drawers, shirts, baby's cloths.
- Dimity A thin cotton fabric woven with a stripe or check of heavier yarn. It is frequently printed in small floral designs and used for lingerie, dresses and curtains.
- Dülbend or türban The generic name of the light cotton fabrics like muslins of inferior quality. It was used for the manufacturing of yazmas.
- Eiderdown A heavy quilt or comforter especially one filled with eiderdown. It is used for bath robes and infants' coats and robes.
- Escamitte A bleached cotton fabric similar in quality to the dimity. Made in Izmir and Sayda, it is used in the manufacture of the linings, shirts, tunics and drawers for the sailors and craftsmen.

Flannel	A light-weight, all wool or wool combined with cotton or silk material of plain or twill weave with slightly napped surface. Specific types are used for infants' garments, men's trousers and dresses.
Flannelette	A cotton fabric plain or printed, napped on one side.
Frieze	A rough, heavy woolen fabric with napped surface in plain or twill weave used for men's overcoating. Coarse wool yarns and shoddy are used in this fabric which is frequently of mixed colors as well as plain.
Kalemkar	A thin cotton fabric used for the yasmak of Turkish women.
Kirba	A lining cloth woven in cotton or linen.
Madapolam	A whitened shirting having the name of the city of its origin in India.
Melton	A heavily felted, short-napped woolen fabric of considerable thickness and little pliability, mainly used for overcoats.
Mermersahi	A fabric coarser than sevaspoor and mainly used for baby's shirts and handkerchiefs. It had a bright appearance and was similar to a very thin madapolam .
Mixture or mélangé	A fabric woven of yarns combining various colors.
Muhacir Bezi	Translated literally as the cloth of immigrant. It was a light, striped, pleated cotton fabric manufactured by the Bulgarian immigrants.
Muslin	A cotton fabric made in various degrees of fineness, and often printed, woven or embroidered in patterns, especially a cotton fabric in plain weave, used for sheets or for a variety of other purposes. The finer qualities are used for underwear. It may be bleached or left in the greige.

Nainsook	A sheer , strongly dressed fabric.
Ratiné	A loosely woven fabric made in plain weave with regulation warp and novelty cotton yarn filling. The texture is rough and rather stretchy.
Rep	A drapery and upholstery fabric very similar to poplin but made of coarser yarns, the crosswise rib being very distinct.
Sandal	A cloth with stripe patterns successively woven in silk and cotton.
Sateen	A woven cloth receiving a mercerized finish and calendering to increase the luster. It is used for lining, draperies and garments.
Serge	A twill-weave fabric made from worsted yarns, sometimes with cotton warp, in a variety of weights and finishes. It is characterized by a prominent diagonal effect on both sides of the cloth.
Sevaspoor	A cotton fabric inferior in quality to the dülbend characterized by its strong dressing.
T-cloth or terry cloth	An unbleached fabric having a special heavy smell which was demanded by the customers. Its other characteristic was the selvage made of four or five colors aligned parallelly, specifically, yellow, purple, poppy-color and the blue. It was used for underwears and lining.
Tarlatan	A fabric similar to muslin. It had an everyday usage. Picture frames, glasses were covered with it, lamps were protected from the flies, fruit-baskets, delights, çörek s, even the beds of the brides were covered with it.
Vichy cotton	A fabric woven with two threads of different colors. It was mostly used for the confection of dresses, aprons and çarsafs (women's outer garment).

Yazma

Translated as kerchiefs. They were small pieces of fabrics used as yemeni (head kerchiefs), bohça (a piece of fabric wrapped around a quantity of dresses, materials... in order to protect them) or quilting sheet. The yazma designs were based on nature with floral, leaf and fruit designs being worked according to their originals. Geometric forms were not common. The principal of yazma was a border design encycling a field.

Zephyr

A sort of very light calico having multicolored twists sometimes striped by linen, woolen or silky lines. It was particularly used for the manufacturing of dresses.
